BM&T announce Jo Holland as new partner

2 September 2015

Jo Holland has been appointed a partner of leading UK and European turnaround boutique Bryan, Mansell & Tilley.

Ms Holland has worked as a Managing Director for BM&T since 2014 across several European jurisdictions. She is a Certified Turnaround Professional and has an impressive list of qualifications and a CV that includes both CEO and advisory roles.

Ms Holland is Australian and spent her early career in the financial services industry in Melbourne and Adelaide. She then spent three years with Arthur Andersen in the UK, leading the development of the turnaround practice before setting up her own firm working closely with Private Equity companies and Funds in delivering and creating value in underperforming portfolio companies.

A Director of the Turnaround Management Association's UK chapter, she is also a member of the European Association of Certified Turnaround Professionals' Education and Training Committee and Faculty. She holds an MBA from the IMD Business School in Lausanne, a Master's in Finance from Melbourne University and a Bachelor's degree from University of South Australia.

BM&T Founding Principal Alan Tilley said: "Jo's extensive experience and boundless energy in managing underperforming businesses, and in strategic and operational expertise in the management of change, are a significant addition to BM&T's offering. She has a great track record as a real transformational leader who has rebuilt underperforming businesses, driving them to profitability and growth. We are delighted she has agreed to join the partnership."
